HUMARITY.

The Louisville Commercial expresses itself in this wise in commenting on the Kemmler execution:

No matter what method is adopted, it is not plate. Lady Dudley, when the Princess of hacty to torture them as much as they tortured Wales and her daughters dired with her a ing, can how feel affy walking on her hand, their yetting, and as they took no pains to spare few evenings ago, had on her table See You can see she must have improved certure, they have no right to expect that the should be more considerate in administoring its justice.

This sounds extremely like saying that human justice may excusably take lessons foliage, shaded from green to brown. A in brutality from a brute. It would be dinner given by Lady de Trafford a forthuman justice may excusably take lessons well for our esteemed contemporary to fix in its mind the force of that old saying: Noblesse oblige.

Even the justice which lets the axe fall on a murderer's neck is an ideal one, for it should still be human justice. Let the Commercial also reflect that the infliction of the death penalty is for the good of society and that order is restored by eliminating the elements of disorders, not by introducing new deviations from rec-

The idea of pouncing on a murderer and venting all the hate and rigor of a personal vengeance in doing him to death is a barbarous, inhuman conception of an important function of society.

GRINDING THE WORKINGMAN DOWN.

The New York Central seems to need a more correct idea of the American workingman than that he is a creature who has only uses and no rights.

Last year, when some of its employees took an interest in the petition to the Legislature for a weekly payment of Legislature for a weekly payment of laborers, and some of them even went to Albany to speak in favor of the bill, the lady could do nothing but attack the animal. The programme as given was as follows: road gave them to understand that it would be better for their interests for them to keep quiet.

Free speech is dear to the workingman, but daily bread for his wife and little ones is dearer. The Central employees did not speak.

Encouraged by this success, the Central worked itself out of the Weekly Payment which became a law for most corpora t ons, and now has been quietly striving to do away with organization among its the tub finely sifted out-meal, into which employees.
